. . . is the first Van Halen album released through their own label, Tattoo You Records. The album is being sold exclusively through the band's official website. At the time of release, the album was the last Van Halen studio album to feature guitarist Sammy Hagar, before Hagar departed the band in 2015. This was the final studio album to feature bassist Michael Anthony, who left Van Halen in July 2013, and Sammy Hagar before his departure from the band in 2015. was recorded over a two-year period. Originally, the album was going to be titled Tuff Enuff, but was later changed to Different Kind of Truth. The album was influenced by 1970s-era singer/songwriter John Denver's music, which was the subject of a tribute album titled Stand Up for Rock and Roll that was released by Hagar on April 24, 2008. Hagar was also inspired to record Van Halen's music by the Tuff Enuff album. Hagar and David Lee Roth have discussed wanting to record the music of the Eagles, but the band's record company, Capitol Records, did not want to sign the group. Hagar was also inspired by Bob Dylan's 1991 album Time Out of Mind, Hagar said that while the album "isn't the sexiest thing around, it's such a powerful piece of music" and that it "was sort of a departure for Dylan". was released on February 7, 2012. The album debuted at #1 on Billboard's Top Hard Rock Albums chart. It also debuted at #1 on the US Billboard 200 with first-week sales of 92,000 copies. It was Van Halen's first studio album to debut at #1 on the Billboard 200 since 1984's For Unlawful Carnal Knowledge. Van Halen is also the first group in history to have five albums reach the top 10 on the Billboard 200 within four months of each other. In 2012, Hagar was inducted into the Hard Rock and Heavy Metal Hall of Fame. The induction was celebrated with a concert at the Madison Square Garden in New York City on October 20, 2012. is Van Halen's final studio album featuring Hagar. Hagar will depart the band in 2015 and will be replaced by Sammy Duet. Contents show] . . 82157476af
